

From: Ryan McLeod <lamiarex@gmail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:14 PM
To: secretary <secretary@CFTC.gov>
Subject: Regulation of Retail Forex

RIN 3038-AC61

Hi, My name is Ryan and i am a forex trader living in the united states. My bank and a social group on the internet I belong to have been abuzz with the proposed leverage limitations that the CFTC have proposed. It worries me that the government would like to step in and really limit what I as a trader can do. The concept to me is that the government wants to protect us from ourselves and never really let us grow, and yes hurt ourselves. How do we learn from our mistakes if we cannot be allowed to make mistakes? These are just my opinions and feelings that I would like you guys to know. So just to clarify I am against the proposed limitations of forex leverage capping.

Sincerely,

Ryan McLeod