

From: jetsettrader@aol.com
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:49 PM
To: secretary <secretary@CFTC.gov>
Subject: NO to proposed Forex leverage changes

---

All these regulations changes would do is benefit the futures industry. Shame on you, leave the people of this country alone! If people want to leverage 100, 200, 500:1 it's their choice, not yours. You wouldn't save anyone from making the same trading choices, just a different market. Not to mention drive 100's of millions of dollars to overseas brokers. If these "regulations" were to take place I would just move my money to london along with every other trader I work with. London is starting to look like a paradise compared to how this country and government are acting lately. Simple rule to operate by: would I like someone taking away my choices and rights? All you need to worry about is fraud and corruption, not directing people.