

From: Jolene Iddison <joleneiddison@hotmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 1:05 AM
To: secretary <secretary@CFTC.gov>
Subject:

I am requesting that you don't change the margin requirement AGAIN for forex trading. This hurts the small trader with limited funds. I have been trading for 4 years and finally have started to become profitable on a small scale. I am steadily increasing my account and was looking forward to being able to finally increase my income and pay my bills. I am using my forex income to make up for the losses in income as a result of the economy. As a single parent, I have always tried to find a way to make income at home. I have worked very hard to improve my trading skills to get to this point. I will have to find a way to increase my account tenfold to even trade with the new leverage requirements. You will be hurting a lot of small traders by such drastic changes to the leverage requirements. Thank you, Jolene Iddison

Hotmail: Trusted email with powerful SPAM protection. Sign up now.