Subject: Regulation of Retail Forex

This message concerns: RIN 3038-AC61. I am a retired Registered Representative (1968-1989) specializing in Futures Contracts. I continue to speculate for my own account. I think it totally inappropriate for you to mess around with individual customer account leverage levels. Let the customers have the freedom and responsibility to manage their own risk. You may think assuming a mandate to protect the retail customers is in our interest, but I strongly disagree. I have a feeling you are attempting to limit public access and participation in these markets to protect the turf of the hedge funds and Investment Banks, and let the public be damned.
