Dear Sir/Madm,

Referance above subject, I understand that the U.S. government is proposing to make a restriction on the leverage of retail Forex to a maximun of 10:1 limitation

I strongly do not support this propose restriction as it would limit the retail Forex to allow the general public to do their trading. If the government insist to pass this leverage limitation, it will only mean the Rich people can participate in the retail forex. Is that what the US government wnat that to be?

I still support the existing US rules on retail Forex limitation leverage of 100:1, where it give the general public a choice to chose and trade within their limit.

I suggest the US govt should have a tighter control/control measure on the brokers which regard on the trading software platform which they offer to the general public for retail forex trading, please make sure the software written is fair and just and not to allow them in any way that they can cheat the general public $$$ . Also, to save guard the gneral public in doing retail forex, the brokers should freeze out the account on those retail trader should they exceed the limit of the account for the money they hv deposited and also for the account is in the losing trade of - US$180.00.

Yours truly,
Wilson
Retail Forex Trader
