Dear Secretary

Please leave margin requirements for Forex trading as they are. I for one have spent intense years trying to learn this vocation. If you change the margin requirements you will not only void my reason for pursuing the vocation to begin with, but you will drastically devalue the skill I've worked so hard to learn and you will lock out traders of meager means from this awesome opportunity to make a living as they dream. Not all of us can make millions throwing touchdowns or singing. You don't regulate the routes a wide receiver can run or the filthy words that make some rich... For folks that only have our intellectual talent to depend on, give us a shot by leaving the margin requirements alone. I could go on about how the margin requirement changes are harming me, but I think I've made my case.

Sincerely
