As a Canadian investor I'm pleased to give my opinion about position limits on metals. I endorse and whole heartedly support the idea of limiting any one trading entity to a maximum of 2000 contracts on either side. If the equivalent of 10 million ounces of silver isnt enough to have as an investment that too bad I suppose we'll all have to suffer.

I use to be an investor is silver a while back but simply stopped when I had read some very compelling info on the internet years ago and realized that they were correct in their assertations that in fact that particular market is being extremely manipulated so I currently stay clear of investing in that market now and will not invest another dime until I see that manipulation eliminated.
