Precious metals markets are the highest dollar amount markets in the world yet our US government allows complete criminal manipulation fraud by a few large bullion bank players. The acts are contemptuous enough to be considered treasonous. As always it is obvious that the government cares nothing about its citizens and their protection.

Since the cat is out of the bag wouldn't this be a good time to permanently correct the allowance of high crimes by the elite few? Criminal acts and intent should be matched with correct criminal justice and protection of the individual investors.

Sincerely, Richard Ronveaux, US citizen
