It is about time that the reins be pulled back on the big banks (most of whom make up the Federal Reserve Bank who have been screwing the world since it's ill gotten enception). Keeping the prices of silver artificially low shores up the dollar and the printed press can work overtime. The crap will hit the fan when silver (which is used extensively in the manufacturing sectors) supplies dry up. I don't expect the board to do anything because they you are part of the problem by allowing this manipulation to go on for many moons inspite of outcries from the public.
