I'm glad to hear you regulators are actually considering investigating and regulating the precious metals markets, by looking at the blatant manipulation that has gone on for years.

Looking the "other way" does not make the problem go away, it only makes you complicit in the flim flam. Isn't it about time to do your jobs? Concerned Americans wonder how you can live with yourselves when you cover up criminal activities by ignoring them? Why don't you just quit, if this is going to be another charade?

If you actually intend to get to the bottom of things, and perform your duty, then kudos to you for growing a conscience. The world is sick of Fiat money and the corruption that goes with it at the highest levels. The world has lost faith in their leaders (for good reason), and a growing number of people can readily see the treasonous fruit of the Federal Reserve's scam.

You can help uncover the fraud of fiat money by bringing Real money like gold and silver back from the dead. Resolve to get to the truth of the matter regarding manipulation, and expose it. You will have done a noble thing.

Sincerely,

Garth Patchen
