

From: yocheved m. feldman <mrsymfeldman@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:05 PM
To: secretary <secretary@CFTC.gov>
Subject: regulation of retail forex

---

hi my identification no. is rin3038-ac61 i'm writing to you because i have learned that there is a debate re. limiting the margin one does have right now trading forex it is very disturbing to me that there is even a discussion about it because if it will only be possible to trade on such a small margin it will make it basicly impossible to earn money on trading forex and it will make sure that all traders open off shore forex accounts that is very risky because they are not regulated as the american retailers are and then those who can not manage there risk appetite should not trade any thing it is not acceptable to regulate because there are some people out there doing risky things would you like a law that rules you can only buy one lottery ticket a day you sure look at it as absurd why because there are some people who wanna spend there money this way law in the u.s. gives right to any one doing what ever his heart desires the only thing i would understand is if the retailers would make sure to explain clearly that forex is not meant for everyone and it is risky
i hope my letter would have an affect on the debate thanks and kind regards
simon