Chairman Gensler

Washington, D.C.

Dear Chairman Gensler

March 16, 2011

I am a new Silver investor, but certainly not into it enough to buy futures. However, according to college instruction I have received, most futures contracts are kept small to make it easier to keep traders from making illegal maneuvers to make money.

However, it is obvious there are too many contracts for silver, and someone is manipulating the prices to their advantage, and not mine. I am hoping that your commission is looking into this and will soon be able to gain control over the market and bring some stability to it.

Thanking you in advance, I remain,

Earl Ranney
