Subject: Regulating Forex

It is a sad day for free enterprise..... the controls on the industry of trading forex is again another act of controlling the public from having the same opportunity as the wealthy. Why when I see an opportunity to make a very good income something arises to mitigate it, it seems that the bureaucrats fear that true stimulation of an economy is not what they are after, but rather to undermine the hard working individual and limit his path to success.

I really hope the US finds themselves at the mercy of another nation stronger than themselves and beg like the common American is doing right now. I think politicians should be ashamed of themselves for acting above the law and manner of the people. Leave the industry alone, it is working just fine.
