Subject: New forex regulation

To whom it may concern,

I am currently working on becoming a full time forex trader so I can get out of the rat race and provide my wife and daughter the life they deserve. I don't want my daughter growing up and having to worry about money like i did. After 3 years of struggling trying to figure out how to trade forex successfully, I am finally starting to get it and making some money. Now I am hearing how you are going to reduce leverage to 10:1. First it was hedging, now this. Only you know the real reason behind all this nonsense, but if it is to get the little guy out of the game, its working. In writing this email I ask you to put yourself in my shoes and every other person out there who dreams of becoming a successfull forex trader one day, and rethink this decision before you crush my dreams not only for myself but for my daughter as well. Thank you for your time.

Respectfully
Jason Curtis
