Subject: Forex regulation

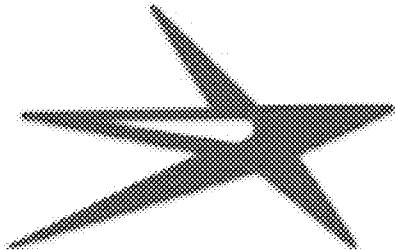

Have the execs who are placing trading under review and proposing new structures considered how many many millions of people of all ages and creeds, countries etc actually benefit enormously from the existing forex trading system.,?

How many millions of private households , charities and so forth really do reap the benefit of successful traders as things currently now stand ?

Perhaps the advantages of leaving things as they are far outway the negative aspects of the Forex system and its accessibility for the average man or woman. ! ?
