

From: eduardo campain <ecamp1274@yahoo.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 6:00 PM
To: secretary <secretary@CFTC.gov>
Subject:

---

Good day,

As a trader of the forex exchange market, I find the new regulation to limit the leverage to 10:1 to be a huge mistake. The professional and traders alike will simply go to of shore accounts to conduct business. Please consider the regulation as over guarding the boundaries of the business. It is important that traders know that the disclaimers are prevelant in trading and a loss of capital is a risk. But without risk aversion their is no reward. All investments including the stock markets have risk. A trader must weigh his or her risk to reward ratio. I need at least 1:100 leverage to make a living as a trader. Passing this regulation will only cost the government tax monies collected from traders and will surely have them look at off shore accounts.

Thanks,

E.C