Subject: Regulation of Retail Forex

I am a beginning investor and the news that I may not even be able to participate has come as a scary potential to me. I personally had been studying Forex for 6 months before even opening a demo account and don't plan on going live until I feel equipt to undertake a real trade fulling knowing the risk and the potential for gain. I feel that I have the potential for success in this market because of my own undertaking and willingness to be patient and learn. While I do appreciate every attemp to help stablize and offer protection to this market I feel that no amount of regulation is going to stop people from making poor choices except for trial, experience and over all the ability to do so! This regulation prohibits all of oppurtunitys to do so.
