Hello,

I am writing with regards to the proposed CFTC/NFA changes to ForEx leveraging. I am a retail investor and have been since the economic downturn in the economy. I've have been unemployed for 20 months and am a highly trained software engineer. Fortunately I had some understanding of the ForEx market and have after a year's learning period begun to support myself and my family in via profits from ForEx investing. I pay taxes from this profit, and hope to some day do larger things.

However, the proposed regulation, limiting the FX leveraging would effectively ruin me. I would be out of business in short order. I have found the brookers in this industry to be reliable and very forthcomming with industry pratices and information on how to be successful.

I urgently request that you reconsider with all due diligence and go no further with any regulations in the forex market.

...James Coleman
