

From: fangwei lee <fangwei.lee@gmail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 3:08 AM
To: secretary <secretary@CFTC.gov>
Subject: Regulation of Retail Forex

---

Restricting leverage to 10-to-1 make rich people richer and leave poor people no chance.

One thing I like about this country is the freedom that this environment provides us. We can be conservative to preserve our capital, and we can also take risks for corresponding rewards. Everyone, no matter what race, gender, social status, financial status you are, have equal opportunity. However, restricting a free market by a random arbitrary number is going to kill the freedom. Average people like us no longer have the opportunity to plan for our retirement via careful risk management, because there is no reward anymore. Imagine a lottery restricting its jackpot to $100, I don't think anyone would participate this kind of lottery. Rich people, in the other hand, can still grow their asset by purchasing hedge fund or from their company. In the end of the day, rich people get richer, and poor people get poorer.

Sincerely for your consideration,

Fangwei Lee