In my opinion, this is a case of "over regulation," and that "education" for traders is a better solution so that the few who don't know what they're doing with leverage doesn't ruin it for the rest of us who do. The United States of America is the land of the free, where each forex trader should be able to make their own educated decisions about their money and take responsibility for their own actions, right?? Right!??

Thank You
