Hi, my name is Sterling. I look at the health care bill and I look at this and while completely separate in nature the trend scares me. Governing agencies are there to represent the people not make decisions for them. This will not solve any problems only create them. Brokers in the US will close because of traders going to overseas brokers to maintain the same leverage. So what's next is there going to be a ban on US citizens signing up with overseas brokers. The principal behind this is wise and proper money management is a good thing but we should have the choice without someone telling us what leverage we can use. I hope this does not go through, I hope that the government agency set in place to represent the people actually listens to the emails you're getting and doesn't pass this.
