Subject: Regulation of Retail Forex

RIN 3038-AC61

Hello. As you may know, there are many retail forex traders such as myself that solely depend on trading forex as a means of making a living. I, along with the majority of the traders I am speaking of, would be severely hampered with the 10-1 leverage. I am voicing my disagreement with this because as an experienced trader that has made forex trading a means of successful self-employment I find it greatly frustrating to further the burden of retail forex trading for those that are skilled and knowledgeable enough at it, especially at a time like this. I hope that you will be deliberative and consider all dissent as well as proponent viewpoints carefully. I strongly believe that less than 1:100 leverage will make the lives of many others in this regard strenuous. Thank you.
